

Dalton School Hong Kong Officially Opens
China Everbright Charitable Foundation welcomes the prestigious new school combining the essence of eastern and western education

12 June 2017 – Supported by China Everbright Limited (“CEL”, stock code: 165.HK) through its China Everbright Charitable Foundation (“CECF”), Dalton School Hong Kong (“DSHK”, “The School”) announced its official opening. DSHK is located at 10 Hoi Fai Road in Kowloon, Hong Kong, in a 3-story spacious building that embraces nature and openness. The School will open its door in mid-August 2017 with Lower Primary classes and will continue its expansion during the 2018-19 school year.

DSHK is a new non-profit, bilingual primary school teaching in both Mandarin and English. What sets DSHK apart from other schools is its unique child-centered program based on the world-renowned Dalton plan, along with its partnership with the esteemed Tsinghua University Primary School to provide a strong emphasis of Chinese language, culture and values. DSHK integrates eastern and western educational disciplines, and strives to help students realise their potential based on moral, intellectual, physical, group and aesthetic education. Using a child-centered environment, DSHK emphasises exploration, collaboration and self-learning, encouraging students to develop community networks in harmony and building a noble character. Long known as the gateway between China and the world, Hong Kong offers distinct competitive advantages for those with outstanding multi-lingual capabilities due to its international perspective and deep-rooted Chinese culture. In recent years, families from Hong Kong as well as expats from overseas and mainland China have shown strong demand for placement at top international schools that support bilingual education, often resulting in insufficient supply. CECF and other corporations jointly established the Dalton Foundation in Hong Kong and opened DSHK after four years of development in order to meet the demand for quality education and contribute to a new generation of talent.

CECF congratulates Dalton School Hong Kong on its official opening and wish the school all the best. CECF is also confident that the School will succeed in its mission of cultivating talent and helping students develop both intellectually and morally.
